Message to Members

The new entrance to the MLK branch did not open in early April as planned, due to restrictions caused by the coronavirus pandemic. Our new lobby and entrance at MLK opened to our members on June 6th, following recommendations from the CDC and local government. Our Bay View location reopened to members on June 6th as well.

We are now nearing the end of our eleven-month construction project. I know that both the MLK remodeling project and restrictions from the coronavirus pandemic have been challenging for our members and staff. Our Board of Directors and management of Brewery Credit Union appreciate your patience and support during our remodeling project and the coronavirus pandemic. We cannot wait for you to see our beautiful new building!

Sincerely,

Steven Janssen
President/CEO

How To Dispute & Pay For Large Medical Bills

Medical bills can be devastating to any budget. Here's how to dispute and pay for large medical bills in five easy steps.

Step 1: Review your bills. Typically, you'll receive an Explanation of Benefits (EOB) from your insurance company in addition to the actual bill telling you how much you're responsible for paying. It's important to hold onto both of these documents and review them carefully. If there is a discrepancy between the two documents, it may be a billing error.

Step 2: Review your insurance coverage. Familiarize yourself with your health insurance policy before disputing any charges. Most health insurance providers offer all members a detailed manual that outlines which treatments and charges are covered and which are not. Here, you can refer back to the EOB to see if the insurance paid for all procedures it claims to cover.

Step 3: Dispute all errors. If your insurance billed you incorrectly, or did not pay for a procedure or treatment that is allegedly covered under your plan, call a company representative to ask about the charge. Be sure to have your bill in front of you and to record all details of the conversation. In both cases, be prepared to make multiple phone calls until you reach a party who can actually effect change. You can also follow up with a written request to challenge a charge.

Step 4: Negotiate the remaining bill. Consider negotiating with the billing office at your doctor's practice for a lower bill. Explain that you are having difficulty with your bill and that you're looking for a way to lower the costs.

Step 5: Create a payment plan or seek funding. Once you have your final bill amount, you may choose to create a payment plan to spread the bill over several months or years to make it manageable. If your doctor's office insists on immediate payment, consider taking out a Brewery Credit Union personal loan. This will provide you with the funds you need to pay your bill immediately, and with a payback plan that won't break your budget.
